Global Perspectives on Design Science Research

Design Science Research Community

Design, by definition, is aimed at creating innovative artefacts. Design Science, then, reflects design artefacts, the design process, etc. Design Science Research is becoming firmly established as a research paradigm in several disciplines related to information sciences, information systems and technologies.

Call for Contributions

The Fifth DESRISt Conference will bring together researchers and practitioners engaged in Design Science Research in the broadest sense. We invite contributions (research papers, demos and panels) that describe your work in all areas of Design Science Research. These include but are not limited to:

- Science of Design and Design Theory
- Philosophical Foundations of Design Science
- Evaluation of Design Science Research
- Design Processes
- Representations for Design
- Design Evolution
- Business and Organizational Design
- Design for Innovation
- Design Economics
- Modularity and Rules in Design
- Architectures for Design
- Meta-Design Control in Design
- Design of Software-Intensive Systems

The domains may include: Software, Services, Database, Business Processes, Information Systems, User Interfaces, Knowledge Discovery and Management, Data Mining, Medical, Health and Bio-Informatics, Social and Virtual Collaboration, Networking and Multimedia Systems, Grid and Peer-to-Peer Computing, Pervasive Computing, and others.

Full Paper Submission

For full paper submission please use the DESRISt 2010 submission system: <http://www.easychair.org/conferences/?conf=desrist2010>

Springer LNCS Proceedings

DESRISt 2010 proceedings will appear as a volume of the renowned Springer LNCS series. Please refer to the official LNCS website for detailed author guidelines, and for respective word processor templates. Papers should be 14 pages long and must not exceed 16 pages.

Demo and Panel Submission

Please send demo or panel submissions by January 22nd, 2010 directly to robert.winter@unisg.ch

Best Paper Awards

Awards will be allotted for the best regular Design Science Research Paper as well as the best Student Paper (to qualify as a student paper, all authors must be under the age of 30).
